Nationally Consistent Collection of Data on School Students with a Disability
The Nationally Consistent Collection of Data on School Students with a Disability is an annual collection that counts the number of students with disability and the level of reasonable educational adjustment they are provided with.

The aim of the national data collection is to collect better information about school students with disability in Australia. All schools will be participating in the data collection in 2015. This information will help teachers and schools to better support students at school and is an opportunity for schools to review their learning and support systems.

Students with a known disability may not need any adjustments made at school and likewise, students without an existing disability diagnosis may have adjustments made. Students who will be included on the data collection are those who are currently having adjustments made to enable them to participate in education on the same basis as students without a disability. Reasonable adjustments could be across the whole school setting (e.g. ramps, handrails), in the classroom (such as adapting class lessons) and at an individual level (extra tuition for a student with learning difficulties).

If reasonable adjustments are being made for your child, the class teacher should have already discussed this with you. The data collection will take place in August this year. More information can be found at the following website:

School Photographs
School Photos will be sent home this week. If you would like to order extra photos, or have any questions regarding the photos that have previously been ordered, please contact The School Photographer on 9674 9824 or by email enquiries@theschoolphotographer.com.au.
